

Association for Industrial Archaeology

Peter Neaverson Award for Digital Initiative and Innovation

- The aim of the award is to recognise the impact that developing digital technologies are having on our understanding, interpretation, dissemination, preservation and conservation of our industrial heritage/archaeology.
- The award will be given to the creator(s) of the work (e.g. animation, online resource, technical survey- such as LiDAR, GIS or 3D laser scanning) which, in the opinion of the judges, has, in the year in question, made the greatest use of digital technologies to assist in the understanding, interpretation, dissemination, preservation or conservation of an historic industrial site, monument, landscape or process.
- Entries may be made by any person. They must be submitted using the attached nomination form and reach the AIA's Liaison Officer by 1st March for consideration for that year's award. Entries will normally only be considered for these awards within three years of their most recent iteration/publication unless exceptional circumstances have delayed their nomination.
- No person who has made a significant contribution to a particular work can nominate or judge it.
- Three judges for the award will be appointed by AIA Council, one of whom will be the AIA's web site manager. A simple majority is required for their decisions.
- If the judges consider that more than one entry deserves recognition in any year, a second "highly commended" award may be made. However, should the judges consider that no nominations in a particular year meet the required criteria, no award will be made.
- The prize will be a cash award of up to £500. The winner(s) will be invited to the AIA's Annual Conference to receive the award. Details of winning entries will be published in IA News and a list of all winners will be maintained on the AIA website.
- Where deemed possible and appropriate a link to the winning entry will be included on the AIA website.
